Was 6, now SEVEN CONFIRMED finds!

Post by saintsray on Jun 21, 2011, 8:45am

The following have been confirmed as discoveries by the BBC. The first three were found by Lance Meenach (LanceM), and the latter three, although known about in certain circles have had the dates confirmed and the Archive holders overseas names confirmed, thanks to Gordon Roxburgh at songs4europe.com. BBC Archiving are aware of these finds, and they are being followed up accordingly. All appear to be in broadcast quality:-

the first three sit in the Louis Round Wilson Special Collections Library in the US. Donated from the personal collection of George Hamilton IV:-

BBC Video, George Hamilton IV, 11/14/1973; spool Number 65, recording 87708; 14 November 1973. 1/2 inch video (Scotch 361)""

This was taken from lostshows.com for "George Hamilton IV and Other Folk"(BBC-TV,1973/1974):

""17.10.73 with Ralph McTell, The Rovers, Des Lane, Roy Warhurst (missing)

24.10.73 with Jake Thackray, Fivepenny Piece, Tommy & David Reilly (missing)

14.11.73 with Friday Brown, King's Singers, The Wurzels (missing)""

...and the three Song for Europe clips, all existing in broadcast quality in the archives of German TV station ARD:-

It's Cliff, 20.02.71 A Song for Europe - All Songs (missing)

Clunk Click, 23.02.74 A Song for Europe - All Songs (missing)

The Song for Europe clips were all on preview tapes sent by the BBC to participating EBU broadcasters who were covering the Eurovision song contest. They have all been confirmed by songs4europe.com as being from the preview shows, not the contest proper.

The finds have all been discussed on other threads, but have only 100% been confirmed as discoveries today. Thanks again to all those involved. Ray. 🙏

The George Hamilton show from November 1973 would be a welcome recovery. It features the Wurzels with their original lead singer Adge Cutler. Adge Cutler died in a car crash in May 1974 before the Wurzels became famous with hits such as Combine Harvester. I imagine recordings of performances with him are quite rare

Slightly O/T....agreed Rich. By the way, I run the largest Wurzels Facebook Group (which I took over from Pete Seaton!)

These are all notable finds, Ray. Well done to you and Lance for identifying them. I hope they find their way back to the archives. Presumably you've made them aware of the finds?

Re: Six CONFIRMED finds!

Post by saintsray on Jun 22, 2011, 10:30am

I have e-mailed the BBC and the archive group is being notified. The other George Hamilton IV video tapes without specific programme title/rec/tx reference I am going to investigate further as they may or may not be missing shows.

Also, slightly O/T, I am also getting a number of AR-TV shows checked out by our resident Rediffusion expert, Tim. At most one or two may be missing, as I think most are just productions directly for the overseas market. They are mainly docs and educational programmes so not on lostshows.com. Forgot to mention this yesterday!

Do let us know about any Rediffusion finds, Ray. Anything recovered for that company is always a top priority for me!

Will message you Laurence - don't get too excited, but give me five and my list will be over to you.

In addition, I have now, after examining the catalogue further (the George Hamilton IV Collection), like to CONFIRM a SEVENTH missing bit of footage found:-

Hi Richard. Back in 1989 when I was at Newport Film School, I found an old black and white film recording in our film cupboard. When I played it I was surprised to see a VT clock entitled 'The Scrumpy and Western Show'. It was a regional pilot for a never produced series featuring Adge Cutler and the Wurzels. The pilot was in fact networked (shown 02/11/1967) and then wiped. The recording I found was a direct positive FR, no negative ever existed. The quality was incredible and I returned the film to the BBC archive. I've since given them the original print permanently.

Adge Cutler appears on the George Hamilton IV show from 30/05/1974 where he performs three tracks with The Wurzels, an episode of Up Sunday from 25/11/1973 where he performs two tracks, an episode of Up Sunday from 21/01/1973 where another two tracks are performed and he also appears on the Acker Bilk show from 28/06/1962. All of these programmes exist. There are one or two other performances which exist in the BBC Bristol archives.

BTW - I've just checked this. The 30/05/1974 George Hamilton IV show is an edited repeat of the 14/11/1973 show. It may be the same tape with sections physically removed, but it does still feature The Kings Singers, Friday Brown and the complete Wurzels performance.

Additionally, the 17/10/1973 George Hamilton IV show which is missing does mostly survive in an edited repeat of 23/05/1974 but the 24/10/1973 show doesn't seem to be about.

Cheers,

Paul

Collection Number: 20410

Collection Title: George Hamilton IV Collection, 1956-2006

This collection has access restrictions. For details, please see the restrictions.

This is a finding aid. It is a description of archival material held in the Wilson Library at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Unless otherwise noted, the materials described below are physically available in our reading room, and not digitally available through the World Wide Web. See the FAQ section for more information.

Collection Overview

Size 7.0 feet of linear shelf space (approximately 2300 items)

Abstract Country musician and native North Carolinian George Hamilton IV was born on 19 July 1937. In 1956, while a student at the University of North Carolina, Hamilton recorded the song "A Rose and a Baby Ruth" for Colonial Records, a local label. From that recording, Hamilton went on to make the transition to country music. He soon became a mainstay at the Grand Ole Opry and, through his work abroad, eventually became known as the International Ambassador of Country Music. The collection includes audiovisual materials, papers, posters, and photographs pertaining to the life and career of George Hamilton IV. Audio recordings consist of audiocassettes, open reel recordings, and transcription disc recordings of performances, interviews, radio shows, and an early recording session, all featuring Hamilton. Included are recordings of the BBC's How the West Was Sung; Country Crossroads; The Ralph Emery Show; a recording of Hamilton's first performance at the Grand Ole Opry; a 1956 recording session at Colonial Records; interviews for BBC Radio and Radio Scotland; and other recorded performances and interviews. Also in the collection is a demo tape of "Gentle on My Mind" by John Hartford. Visual materials include films and videotapes of television shows and promotional spots from the United States, Great Britain, and Canada. Papers consist of newspaper clippings, press releases and other promotional materials, programs, correspondence, posters, and other materials pertaining to Hamilton's career. Photographs consist of both professional and candid photographs of George Hamilton IV, his family and friends, and associated musicians and music industry professionals, including David Allan, Chet Atkins, Jiri Brabec, Charles Chilton, Jim Clark, Patsy Cline, Mervyn Conn, Clarence Count, Country Express, Skeeter Davis, Pat Derry, Bruce Eller, Connie B. Gay, Walt Grealis, Rolf Harris, The Hillsiders, Frank Ifield, Gordon Lightfoot, John D. Loudermilk, Loretta Lynn, Miki & Griff, Jimmy Moore, Anne Murray, Olivia Newton-John, Jack Rodgers, Slim Whitman, Wally Whyton, and Paul Yandell.

Interesting find. It never ceases to amaze me that stuff can turn up in groups at once.

Biographical Information

George Hamilton IV was born on 19 July 1937 in Winston-Salem, N.C. On 18 June 1956, while a student at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, N.C., Hamilton recorded the song, "A Rose and a Baby Ruth" (written by John D. Loudermilk) for Orville Campbell's Colonial Records, also in Chapel Hill. From that recording, which became a hugely successful pop teen hit, Hamilton went on to make the transition to country music; become a mainstay at the Grand Ole Opry; and, through his work abroad, become recognized as the International Ambassador of Country Music.

By the late 1950s, Hamilton had moved to Washington, D.C., and become a regular performer (with Patsy Cline, for a time) on Jimmy Dean's "Town and Country Jamboree" show. He had also toured with Bobby Darin, Chuck Berry, Buddy Holly, and the Everly Brothers, along with many other well-known pop stars, and made numerous national television appearances. Although "A Rose and a Baby Ruth," acquired by ABC-Paramount Records, had become the label's first million-selling record, in January 1960, feeling miscast as a teen pop singer and following his love of country music, Hamilton and his young family moved to Nashville.

On 8 February 1960, Hamilton officially became a member of the Grand Ole Opry. Later that year, he began recording for RCA Records, having been signed by Chet Atkins. In 1963, John D. Loudermilk's "Abilene" became a number-one hit for Hamilton on the country charts and reached the top 20 in pop. His interest in Canadian songwriters became evident in the late 1960s when he recorded songs by Joni Mitchell, Leonard Cohen, Buffy Sainte-Marie, and Gordon Lightfoot. In 1969, his first record of all Canadian music was released. Hamilton's internationalism was also shown by a long-standing involvement with the annual International Festival of Country Music, held at Wembley (UK), which began that same year. An association with the BBC also developed as Hamilton hosted many programs--variety and documentary--that showcased country music. His performance at Moscow University in 1974 was the first for an American country music performer. Other "first" performances on this tour were in Hungary, Poland, and Czechoslovakia. Later that year, Billboard Magazine began to refer to Hamilton as the "International Ambassador of Country Music."

In 1971, Hamilton left Nashville and the Grand Ole Opry for Charlotte, N.C., to join the broadcasts of Arthur Smith's country music television show. He continued to work overseas while also maintaining a busy touring schedule in the United States. In the 1990s, he became involved with several musical theater and concert productions that featured the work of Patsy Cline, with Irish singer Sandy Kelly playing the title role.

Hamilton has continued to record country, folk, and gospel albums, including two with his son, George Hamilton V. In 2006, he celebrated his 50th year as a recording artist, which included a special reception hosted in London by the United States Ambassador to Britain.

Scope and Content

The George Hamilton IV Collection includes audiovisual materials, papers, posters, and photographs pertaining to the life and career of the country singer and guitarist. Audio recordings consist of audiocassettes, open reel recordings, and transcription disc recordings of performances, interviews, radio shows, and an early recording session, all featuring Hamilton. Included are recordings of the BBC's How the West Was Sung; Country Crossroads; The Ralph Emery Show; a recording of Hamilton's first performance at the Grand Ole Opry; a 1956 recording session at Colonial Records; interviews for BBC Radio and Radio Scotland; and other recorded performances and interviews. Also in the collection is a demo tape of "Gentle on My Mind" by John Hartford. Visual materials include films and videotapes of television shows and promotional spots from the United States, Great Britain, and Canada. Papers consist of newspaper clippings, press releases and other promotional materials, programs, correspondence, posters, and other materials pertaining to Hamilton's career.
